12 v.

ORDER GRANTING DEFENDANTS'
MOTION FOR PARTIAL SUMMARY
JUDGMENT13
14 ALEX FAGAN, JR., et al.,15 Defendants.
16INTRODUCTION

17 Before the Court is San Francisco police officer Alex Fagan Jr., Officer Walter Contreras, 18 and the City and County of San Francisco's ("the City") (collectively "Defendants") motion for 19 summary judgment ("Motion") as to Plaintiffs Kevin Jordan and James Washburn's Monell
20 claims. Plaintiffs have requested that the Court postpone ruling on the summary judgment motion 21 and allow them to engage in further discovery pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 56(f).
22 This Order reflects the Court's careful consideration of the parties' briefs as well as the arguments 23 proffered at the hearing. For the following reasons, the Court GRANTS Defendants' Motion for 24 Summary Judgment as to the Monell claims and DENIES Plaintiffs' Rule 56(f) request.

FACTUAL BACKGROUND

25 To the extent the Court recited the facts of both Washburn and Jordan's constitutional 26 claims in its previous summary judgment order, the Court need not repeat them here. For 27 purposes of the current motion, Plaintiffs contend that the City should be held liable for Fagan's 28

1 use of excessive force against Plaintiffs.¹ In support of their claim, Plaintiffs assert that Fagan had 2 a history of violent episodes and otherwise unsavory behavior during his brief stint as a San 3 Francisco police officer. Plaintiffs contend that Fagan's unsuitability for employment as a police
4 officer should have been readily apparent from his original employment application. Fagan's 5 application for the San Francisco police department reflected that he had admitted drunk driving, 6 had been charged with buying alcohol with falsified identification, smoked marijuana, received 7 two speeding convictions within ninety days in 1999, and was involved in car accidents in 1996 8 and 1999. In addition, a psychological exam found him only "marginally suitable" for work as a 9 police officer, and Fagan admitted to the physician examiner that he has "a fiery temper 10 sometimes." (Declaration of Jai Goehl in Support of Plaintiffs' Opposition to Defendants' Motion 11 for Summary Judgment (Monell) ("Goehl Decl.") at Ex. 4.)

12 Plaintiffs also contend that Fagan reportedly got into a fist fight with a fellow recruit at the 13 police academy and was reported to have had a serious confrontation with his Field Training 14 Officer. In addition, Plaintiffs assert that while in field training, Fagan apparently had three 15 "reportable uses of force," thereby triggering the standard departmental counseling program.
16 Fagan's immediate supervisor, Sergeant Stansberry, authored a memorandum on September 19, 17 2002, in which she concluded that Fagan "displayed a pattern with lack of anger management, not 18 being respectful of supervisors, not following direct orders from supervisors, driving too fast and 19 treating the public unprofessionally."² (Gohel Decl. at Ex. 1.) Stansberry recommended that 20 Fagan be sent for retraining, including participation in "Anger Management" classes.

21 Despite all of these occurrences, Plaintiffs argue that the City failed to properly discipline 22 Fagan or take any other remedial action. Plaintiffs contend that this resulted from the fact that 23 Fagan's father ("Assistant Chief Fagan") was a high ranking member of the San Francisco Police 24 Department during the time period at issue.

26 _____
27 ¹The incident involving Washburn occurred on January 27, 2002. The incident involving Jordan occurred on July 23, 2003.

28 ²Stansberry's memorandum was later leaked to the press. Plaintiffs assert that Stansberry suffered retaliation at the hand of police officials once the details of the memorandum became public.

LEGAL STANDARD

The summary judgment procedure is a method for promptly disposing of actions. See FED. R. CIV. PROC. 56. The judgment sought will be granted if “there is no genuine issue as to any material fact and [] the moving party is entitled to judgment as a matter of law.” FED. R. CIV. PROC. 56(c). “[A] moving party without the ultimate burden of persuasion at trial [] may carry its initial burden of production by either of two methods. The moving party may produce evidence negating an essential element of the nonmoving party’s case, or, after suitable discovery, the moving party may show that the nonmoving party does not have enough evidence of an essential element of its claim or defense to carry its ultimate burden of persuasion at trial.” Nissan Fire & Marine Ins. Co., Ltd., v. Fritz Companies, 210 F.3d 1099, 1102 (9th Cir. 2000). If the movant meets its burden, the nonmoving party must come forward with specific facts demonstrating a genuine factual issue for trial. Matsushita Elec. Indus. Co., Ltd. v. Zenith Radio Corp., 475 U.S. 574, 587 (1986).

If the nonmoving party fails to make a showing sufficient to establish the existence of an element essential to that party’s case, and on which that party will bear the burden of proof at trial, “the moving party is entitled to a judgment as a matter of law.” Celotex Corp. v. Catrett, 477 U.S. 317, 323 (1986). In opposing summary judgment, the nonmoving party may not rest on his pleadings. He “must produce at least some ‘significant probative evidence tending to support the complaint.’” T.W. Elec. Serv., Inc. v. Pacific Elec. Contractors Ass’n, 809 F.2d 626, 630 (9th Cir. 1987) (quoting First Nat’l Bank v. Cities Serv. Co., 391 U.S. 253, 290 (1968)).

The Court does not make credibility determinations with respect to evidence offered, and is required to draw all inferences in the light most favorable to the non-moving party. See T.W. Elec., 809 F.2d at 630-31 (citing Matsushita, 475 U.S. at 587). Summary judgment is therefore not appropriate “where contradictory inferences may reasonably be drawn from undisputed evidentiary facts” Hollingsworth Solderless Terminal Co. v. Turley, 622 F.2d 1324, 1335 (9th Cir. 1980).

ANALYSIS

Section 1983 “provides a cause of action for the ‘deprivation of any rights, privileges, or 1 immunities secured by the Constitution and laws' of the United States." Wilder v. Virg. Hosp.

2 Ass'n

3 496 U.S. 498, 508 (1990) (quoting 42 U.S.C. § 1983). To state a claim under § 1983, a 4 plaintiff must allege two essential elements: (1) that a right secured by the Constitution or laws of 5 the United States was violated and (2) that the alleged violation was committed by a person acting 6 under the color of state law, statute, ordinance, regulation custom, or usage. See West v. Atkins, 7 487 U.S. 42, 48 (1988); Ketchum v. Alameda County, 811 F.2d 1243, 1245 (9th Cir. 1987).

8 A local government body, such as a municipality, cannot be held liable for the 9 unconstitutional acts of its officers in a § 1983 action based solely on the doctrine of respondeat
10 superior. Monell v. Dep't of Social Servs. of the City of New York, 436 U.S. 658, 690-91 (1978).
11 Under Monell, a municipality is only subject to § 1983 liability for an employee's unconstitutional 12 act where the execution of the municipality's policy or custom caused the constitutional injury.
13 Id. at 694. A plaintiff may prove municipal liability by demonstrating: (1) a longstanding practice 14 or custom that constitutes the standard operating procedure of the local entity; (2) that the 15 individual who committed the tort was an official with "final policy-making authority" such that 16 the challenged action itself constituted an act of official municipal policy; or (3) that an official 17 with final policy-making authority ratified the unconstitutional decision of a subordinate. Ulrich v.
18 City & County of San Francisco, 308 F.3d 968, 984-85 (9th Cir. 2002). "[A]n act performed 19 pursuant to a 'custom' that has not been formally approved by an appropriate decisionmaker may 20 fairly subject a municipality to liability on the theory that a relevant practice is so widespread as to 21 have the force of law." Bd. of the County Comm'rs of Bryan County v. Brown, 520 U.S. 397, 404 (1997).

22 However, liability may not be imposed against a municipality for claimed violations of 23 constitutional rights "unless deliberate action attributable to the municipality is itself the 'moving 24 force' behind the plaintiff's deprivation of federal rights." Bryan County, 520 U.S. at 400. In 25 order to show that "deliberate conduct" was the "moving force," a plaintiff must demonstrate "that 26 the municipal action was taken with the requisite degree of culpability and must demonstrate a 27 causal link between the municipal action and the deprivation of federal rights." Id. at 407. It is 28 not enough to show that a plaintiff suffered a deprivation of rights at the hands of a municipal

1 employee. See id. at 409. Rather, the plaintiff must further demonstrate that an act of the 2 municipality itself, taken with “deliberate indifference as to its known or obvious consequences,” 3 led the employee to deprive the plaintiff of his federal rights. Id. The deliberate indifference 4 standard is “a stringent standard of fault,” id. at 412, requiring proof that the “plainly obvious 5 consequence” of a decision by a municipal policy making official would be the particular injury 6 suffered by the plaintiff. Id. at 413.

7 I. Practice and Custom

8 “Liability for improper custom may not be predicated on isolated or sporadic events; it 9 must be founded upon practices of sufficient duration, frequency and consistency that the conduct 10 has become a traditional method of carrying out policy.” Trevino v. Gates, 99 F.3d 911, 918 (9th 11 Cir. 1996). When one must resort to inference, conjecture and speculation to explain events, the 12 challenged practice is not of sufficient duration, frequency and consistency to constitute an 13 actionable policy or custom. Id. at 920.

14 A. Failure to Discipline

15 Plaintiffs contend that they have demonstrated that Defendants engaged in the practice and 16 custom of tolerating Fagan’s use of violence and excessive force throughout his sixteen months on 17 the police force. In support, Plaintiffs note that Defendants were aware of the negative 18 information contained in Fagan’s employment application, Fagan’s penchant for using force, and 19 Fagan’s poor job evaluations. Despite being aware of this information, Plaintiffs argue that 20 Defendants’ took no action to investigate or discipline Fagan.

21 Defendants respond that Plaintiffs’ “custom” theory of liability can only succeed if Fagan’s 22 alleged misconduct is connected and related to Plaintiffs’ excessive force claims. Defendants also 23 argue that it is not enough for Plaintiffs to simply demonstrate that the City ignored Defendants’ 24 prior violations of office policy if that misconduct did not rise to the level of a constitutional 25 violation.

26 As an initial matter, the Court notes that Plaintiffs must produce evidence that the City had 27 prior notice that a constitutional violation was likely to occur, and acted with deliberate 28 indifference to this risk. See Los Angeles Police Protective League v. Gates, 907 F.2d 879, 889

1 (9th Cir. 1990) (stating that a plaintiff must demonstrate that his constitutional rights were violated 2 as a result of an official city policy or custom) (citation omitted). Thus, Plaintiffs must "establish a 3 municipal custom coupled with causation - i.e., that policymakers were aware of similar unlawful 4 conduct in the past, but failed to take precautions against future violations, and that this failure, at 5 least in part, led to their injury." Bielevicz v. Dubinon, 915 F.2d 845, 851 (3d Cir. 1990). The Ninth 6 Circuit has held that post-event evidence is admissible for proving the existence of a municipal 7 defendant's policy or custom and "may be" highly probative of that inquiry. Henry v. County of 8 Shasta, 132 F.3d 512, 520 (9th Cir. 1997).

9 After considering the entirety of the evidence in the record, the Court finds that Plaintiffs 10 have failed to produce evidence of any constitutional violations perpetuated by Fagan that resulted 11 from an existing policy attributable to municipal policy decision makers.³ As an initial matter, 12 Plaintiffs assert that Fagan had three “use of force” incidents during the first 90 days of his post-13 academy probationary period, which triggered a counseling session with Sergeant Lewis.
14 Sergeant Stansberry testified that Sergeant Lewis authored a memorandum documenting these 15 “use of force” incidents. However, the only evidence in the record pertaining to the “use of force” 16 incidents is the Stansberry’s deposition testimony. No documentary evidence of these incidents 17 nor any report from Sergeant Lewis is in the record. In fact, Stansberry admitted that she had 18 never seen Sergeant Lewis’s memorandum. Her only knowledge of these incidents stemmed from 19 a conversation she had with Sergeant Lewis. (Deposition of Sergeant Stansberry at 343:13-344:6.)
20 Without more, Plaintiffs’ allegations regarding these “use of force” incidents are not sufficient to 21 raise an issue of fact regarding whether the City was aware of Fagan’s propensity to use excessive 22 force.

23 Moreover, Stansberry’s Performance Improvement Plan (“PIP”) evaluations of Fagan do 24 not address whether Fagan had a penchant for using excessive force. Rather, the majority of these 25 evaluations describe Fagan’s interpersonal relationships with other officers, insubordination, and 27 ³Despite Plaintiffs' assertion to the contrary, the Court finds that Fagan's background prior to 28 his employment as a police officer, including his arrest for buying alcohol as a minor and his fights at the police academy, does not factor into whether the City had a policy or custom of failing to discipline Fagan.

1 lack of sensitivity in resolving conflicts. Moreover, while the September 2002 PIP evaluation 2 alludes to Fagan's overuse of handcuffs and "his consistent ability to incite suspects into 3 becoming resistors (i.e. poking his finger in their chest as he calls them names)," this evaluation 4 occurred well after the Jordan and Washburn incidents, and thus does not factor into the Court's 5 analysis. (Gohel Decl. at Ex. 16.)

6 Furthermore, Plaintiffs' reliance upon Stansberry's April 30, 2002 memorandum, in which 7 she discusses three more "use of force incidents" involving Fagan, is unfounded.⁴ An examination 8 of that memorandum reveals that Stansberry "determined that there was not a negative pattern of 9 conduct in these Use of Force Entries. It should be noted that two of these three incidents were 10 illustrations of excellent felony arrests by Officer Fagan." (Reply Declaration (Original) of David 11 Newdorf, Ex. B.) Stansberry's memorandum does not discuss any of the three incidents in detail, 12 and certainly does not find that Fagan's use of force in any of the incidents was excessive.

13 The Court finds that the record does reflect that Fagan had a total of four citizen complaints 14 filed against him at the Office of Citizen Complaints. (Declaration of Captain Denis O'Leary 15 ("O'Leary Decl.") at ¶4.) The initial complaint against Fagan was received before the Washburn 16 and Jordan incidents, but it did not involve the use of force. The next complaint received was 17 Washburn's complaint, but it was not filed until three days after the Jordan incident. Thus, in the 18 absence of any excessive force claims against Fagan prior to the Washburn or Jordan incidents, the 19 City would have had no basis for disciplining Fagan prior to July 26, 2002.

20 However, Plaintiffs also rely on post-event evidence in an attempt to establish their Monell 21 claims. This evidence consists of, in part, Stansberry's September 19, 2002 memo and the 22 November 20, 2002 "Fajitagate" incident. Neither of the events lend support to Plaintiffs' failure 23 to discipline theory. Stansberry's September 19, 2002 memo concluded that Fagan "displayed a 24 pattern with lack of anger management, not being respectful of supervisors, not following direct 25 orders from supervisors, driving too fast and treating the public unprofessionally." (Gohel Decl. at

27 ⁴Plaintiffs also assert that Stansberry was retaliated against by members of the police department 28 based on the unflattering statements she made about Fagan in a September 19, 2002 memorandum.
The Court finds that these allegations are irrelevant because they do not tend to prove or disprove whether the City is liable for a widespread unconstitutional custom or practice.

1 Ex. 1.) The memo does not discuss Fagan's proclivity to use excessive force. Moreover, the 2 "Fajitagate" incident involved Fagan's actions while off-duty, and hence this incident does not fall 3 within the ambit of the city's province. Thus, neither of these incidents lend support to Plaintiffs' 4 Monell claims.

5 Plaintiff's also rely upon other post-event incidents involving Fagan, including the 6 September 18, 2002 arrest of James Smith and the alleged punching of a prisoner at Park Station.
7 While Plaintiffs assert that this evidence should be considered highly probative of the City's 8 policy of failing to discipline Fagan, the Court is unpersuaded. In Henry, the court found that the 9 municipal defendant's failure to correct a "a blatantly unconstitutional course of 10 treatment—stripping persons who have committed minor traffic infractions, throwing them naked 11 into a 'rubber room' and holding them there for ten hours or more for failing to sign a traffic ticket 12 or asserting their legal right to be brought before magistrate" – raised questions of fact whether the 13 defendant had a policy which encouraged such misconduct. 132 F.3d at 520. The Henry court 14 stated that "the evidence of the officials' conduct strongly suggests that Henry's treatment resulted 15 from a widespread pattern of abuse by numerous individuals rather than a single instance of 16 mistreatment by a solitary officer." Id. at 521.

17 The Court finds that Henry is clearly distinguishable from the present case. Here, Plaintiffs 18 have not established that the City's policy of failing to discipline officers was "a widespread 19 pattern of abuse by numerous individuals." Rather, Plaintiffs' evidence focuses on the City's 20 failure to discipline a single officer - Officer Fagan.

21 Furthermore, the Henry court emphasized the "blatantly unconstitutional course of 22 treatment" involved in that case. In contrast to the very clear instances of abuse and gross 23 recklessness alleged in Henry, the allegations of excessive force against Fagan stemming from the 24 September 18, 2002 arrest of James Smith and the punching of a prisoner at Park Station are, at 25 best, unclear. While Stanberry's September 19, 2002 memo states that James Smith's alleged that 26 Fagan "kicked [him] in the head," this allegation was directly contradicted by other officers at the 27 scene. Furthermore, after Smith sued Fagan and the City for civil rights violations in San 28 Francisco Superior Court, the jury rendered a special verdict that Fagan and his partner did not

1 “intentionally touch Mr. Smith or cause Mr. Smith to be touched.” Regarding the punching of a 2 prisoner at Park Station, the only evidence in the record supporting this incident is Stansberry’s
 3 deposition testimony. Stansberry made no mention of this incident in her September 19, 2002 4 memo and no citizen’s compliant was ever filed in connection with the incident. In sum, these 5 two alleged incidents stand in stark contrast to the “blatantly unconstitutional” acts found in 6 Henry, and hence the Court finds them insufficient to support Plaintiffs’ Monell claim.

7 For the foregoing reasons, the Court finds that Plaintiffs have failed to raise a genuine issue 8 of material fact regarding whether the City had a policy or custom of permitting the use of 9 excessive force and failing to punish officers for such conduct.⁵

10 B. Failure to Train

11 ⁵Plaintiffs also assert that there is a broader practice and custom within the City to indulge, absent appropriate discipline, police misconduct, violence and excessive force. At the outset, the Court 12 notes again that only deprivations occurring pursuant to municipal custom or policy lead to municipal 13 liability. Thus, to avoid summary judgment, Plaintiffs must demonstrate the existence of an official 14 policy and, as importantly, that this policy evidences a deliberate indifference to Plaintiffs’ 15 constitutional rights. Oviatt v. Pearce, 954 F.2d 1470, 1476-77 (9th Cir. 1992). The Court finds, for the 16 reasons below, that Plaintiffs have failed to establish a genuine material issue of fact regarding the 17 existence of a policy which reflects deliberate indifference on the part of an official policy-maker as to 18 their failure to discipline claim. Initially, the Court notes that the specific incidents of force involving 19 Defendant Fagan, relied upon by Plaintiffs, do not, without more, rise to a level of an official custom or practice. Haugen v. Brosseau, 351 F.3d 372, 393 (9th Cir. 2003); see also Santiago v. Fenton, 891
 20 F.2d 373, 382 (1st Cir. 1997). The Court also finds that Plaintiffs’ reliance upon the Civil Grand Jury 21 Findings and the ACLU report to establish a broader custom and practice in support of Plaintiffs’ failure 22 to discipline claims, is insufficient. The Civil Grand Jury report focuses on the need to expedite citizen 23 complaint investigations and thus does not establish the requisite notice or causation elements for 24 Monell claims required under existing case law. Oviatt, 954 F.2d 1477-78. The Court also finds the 25 declaration and report of ACLU policy analyst Mark Schlossberg insufficient for the purposes of this 26 summary judgment motion. First, like the Grand Jury report, the ACLU report does not help to establish 27 the elements of notice and causation. The focus of the ACLU report is the alleged inadequacy of police 28 accountability mechanisms within the city of San Francisco. The report does not, however, address the issue pertinent to this motion - whether this allegedly inadequate system was the result of actions by city policy-makers arising from deliberate indifference to Plaintiffs’ constitutional rights. For example, the report cites several “breakdowns” in city accountability systems, including the failure of managers within the police department to timely investigate citizen complaints and the failure to discipline officers who engaged in misconduct. While these conclusions may point to problems with city accountability mechanisms, they do not help establish that city policy makers were on notice of these problems or that these problems were caused by deliberate indifference on the part of city policy-makers. Id. Additionally, the Court finds that the ACLU report is not admissible under Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(c)(1). Rule 37(c)(1) states that “a party that...fails to disclose information...is not...permitted to use as evidence....on a motion any witness or information not so disclosed.” Schlossberg is an expert under Fed. R. Evid.
 702, and Plaintiffs did not timely disclose his identity pursuant to Fed. R.Civ. P. 26(a)(2). Per the Court’s scheduling order, the deadline for disclosure of experts was March 1, 2005; Defendants would be prejudiced if the Court were to consider this evidence. (Doc. No. 64). Accordingly, Rule 37(c)(1) provides an additional basis for the Court not to consider the ACLU report in this motion.

1 While Plaintiffs have argued that Fagan's training was deficient, the evidence supporting 2 their claim is woefully inadequate. Plaintiff have produced no evidence regarding the procedures
 3 and tactics employed by the City to train Fagan. Plaintiffs have also failed to offer any argument 4 as to how the alleged use of excessive force against Plaintiffs was caused by a failure in training.
 5 Defendants have produced evidence that Fagan received the standard 960-hour Police Academy 6 course before he became a police officer and completed an additional 60 hours of training while he 7 was an officer. Accordingly, Plaintiffs have not established a genuine issue of material fact as to 8 the question of whether Fagan received deficient police training.⁶

9 II. Ratification

10 In addition to their "custom and policy" theories, Plaintiffs assert that the City ratified "the 11 misconduct, of its officers by failing to investigate, delay, or cover-up misdeeds." (Plaintiffs' 12 Memorandum in Opposition to Summary Judgment ("Opp.") (Monell) at 37:2-3.) In Christie v.
 13 Iopa, the Ninth Circuit explained the ratification theory of municipal liability:

14 To show ratification, a plaintiff must prove that the authorized policymakers 15 approve a subordinate's decision and the basis for it Accordingly, 16 ratification requires, among other things, knowledge of the alleged 17 constitutional violation.
 18 176 F.3d 1231, 1239 (9th Cir. 1999) (internal quotation marks and internal citations omitted).
 19 Ratification must be evidenced by a policymaker's "conscious, affirmative choice." Gillette v.
 20 Delmore, 979 F.2d 1342, 1347 (9th Cir. 1992). Lack of evidence that a final policymaker was 21 aware of the incident is fatal to a plaintiff's claim that an authorized official ratified the specific 22 conduct at issue. See City of St. Louis v. Praprotnik, 485 U.S. 112, 123 (1988) (plurality) ("[O]nly 23 those municipal officials who have 'final policymaking authority' may by their actions subject the 24 ⁶Plaintiffs have also not raised a genuine issue of material fact as to the City's decision to hire 25 Fagan as a police officer. Only where adequate scrutiny of the applicant's background would lead a 26 reasonable policymaker to conclude that the plainly obvious consequence of the decision to hire the 27 applicant would be the deprivation of a third party's federally protected right can the official's failure 28 to adequately scrutinize the applicant's background constitute "deliberate indifference." Bryan County, 520 at 411. "[Culpability] must depend on a finding that this officer was highly likely to inflict the particular injury suffered by the plaintiff." Id. at 412 (emphasis in the original). Plaintiffs' only evidence supporting improper hiring is that Fagan had a "fiery temper" and possible "anger management" issues. (Dr. Leinhart's Report, attached to Gohel Decl. at Ex. 8.) However, there is nothing in the record, prior to the date Fagan was hired by the City, to suggest that he would be likely to engage in physical fighting or use excessive force.

1 government to § 1983 liability.”).

2 The Court finds that Plaintiffs’ ratification theory fails for the simple reason that Plaintiffs 3 have produced no evidence demonstrating which municipal officers have final policymaking 4 authority for the City. See Christie, 176 F.3d at 1239 (“However, as with any jury question, a 5 plaintiff must establish that there is a genuine issue of material fact regarding whether a 6 ratification occurred.”). In Plaintiffs’ opposition brief, they contend that Sergeant Stansberry, 7 Officer Kristal, and Assistant Police Chief Alex Fagan Sr. were aware of Fagan’s alleged 8 misconduct. Plaintiffs also assert that ‘Fagan’s conduct was widely known to other members of 9 the SFPD.” (Opp. at 37:9-10.) However, there is no evidence to support the conclusion that any 10 of these individuals were authorized policymakers for the City. Accordingly, Plaintiffs have not 11 established a genuine issue of material fact as to the question of whether City policymakers 12 ratified Fagan’s actions.⁷

13 III. State Law Claims

14 Defendants move for summary judgment as to the following state law claims: 1) 15 defamation and invasion of privacy; 2) common law failure to intervene; 3) common law 16 conspiracy and cover up; and 4) negligence. Defendants assert that California Government Code 17 Section 821.6 provides absolute immunity from these claims. Section 821.6 states in its entirety:

18 A public employee is not liable for an injury caused by his instituting or prosecuting any 19 judicial or administrative proceeding within the scope of his employment, even if he acts maliciously and without probable cause.

20 This immunity applies whether the police allegedly “acted negligently, maliciously or with 21 probable cause in carrying out their duties.” Baughman v. State of California, 38 Cal. App. 4th 22 182, 192 (1995). This immunity applies at all stages of a judicial or administrative proceeding, 23 starting with investigation and arrest or detention. See Amylou R. v. County of Riverside, 28 Cal.
 24 App. 4th 1205, 1212-13 ((1994)).

25 Here, the Court finds that Section 821.6 immunity applies because each of the five state 26 law claims are based on injuries Plaintiffs allegedly suffered from being detained and arrested in a

27
 28 ⁷Similarly, the Court finds that Plaintiffs have produced no evidence that the City has a custom, approved by final policy-makers, of deliberate indifference to the right of a member of the department to report a superior the misconduct of a fellow officer, i.e., the practice of the “code of silence.”

1 criminal investigation.⁸ Accordingly, the Court GRANTS Defendants' motion for summary 2 judgment as to these claims.⁹

4 IV. Bifurcation and Consolidation

5 Plaintiff Washburn has renewed his request to consolidate the trials of Washburn and 6 Jordan pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P 42(a).¹⁰ Rule 42 permits the consolidation of claims and issues 7 which share common aspects of law or fact. Fed. R. Civ. P. 42(a). Consolidation is inappropriate
 8 "if it leads to inefficiency, inconvenience, or unfair prejudice to a party." E.E.O.C. v. HBE Corp., 9 135 F.3d 543, 550-551 (8th Cir. 1998). The Court finds that consolidation of the Washburn and 10 Jordan trials is not appropriate. Each concerns incidents that are factually unrelated, and 11 consolidation would, therefore, not result in efficiencies for the Court or the parties. There would 12 be, however, a significant risk of prejudice to Defendant Fagan, since both incidents involve the 13 use of force by Defendant Fagan on different occasions. Accordingly, the Court DENIES 14 Plaintiffs' request to consolidate the claims and cases of Plaintiffs Washburn and Jordan.¹¹

16 V. Plaintiffs' Rule 56(f) Request

17 Under Rule 56(f), a district court may refuse to grant a party's motion for summary judgment 18 on the ground that the opposing party requires time to conduct further discovery. Rule 56(f)

20 _____
 21 ⁸Plaintiffs contend that the City may be directly liable for failure to discharge a mandatory duty 22 under California Government Code § 815.6. Plaintiffs assert that they will present evidence that a San 23 Francisco Department General Order prevents the assignment of two probationary officers from working 24 together, and that Fagan and Officer Kristal, both probationary officers, were assigned to patrol 25 together in this case. Plaintiffs' argument is without merit. Police departmental or municipal policy 26 directive do not create a mandatory duty to individual citizens. Lehto v. City of Oxford, 171 Cal. App.
 27 3d 285, 292-95 (1985).

28 ⁹Plaintiff Washburn voluntarily withdrew his intentional infliction of emotional distress claim.
 29 (Doc. No. 91).

30 ¹⁰Plaintiff Washburn's Renewed Motion for Full Consolidation of Claims. (Doc. No. 244).

31 ¹¹ Plaintiff Washburn also has renewed his request to avoid bifurcating Plaintiff's Monell claims 32 from his individual liability claims. In light of this order dismissing Plaintiff's Monell claims, the Court 33 DENIES Plaintiff's request as moot. The Court also DENIES Plaintiffs' request to reconsider the 34 Court's previous grant of summary judgment as to Plaintiffs' false arrest claims. Plaintiffs have not 35 demonstrated new law or facts to justify such reconsideration.

1 requires the party seeking further discovery to demonstrate diligence in prior discovery attempts, 2 and make a showing that the evidence it sought would require denial of the motion for summary
3 judgment. Qualls v. Blue Cross of Cal., Inc., 22 F.3d 839, 844 (9th Cir. 1994). The moving party 4 must “specifically identif[y]” the relevant information, show “some basis for believing that the 5 information actually exists”, and that this information would “prevent summary judgment.” VISA
6 Intern. Service Ass'n v. Bankcard Holders of America, 784 F.2d 1472, 1475 (9th Cir. 1986)

7 At oral argument, Plaintiffs stated that they seek to obtain the following discovery: 1) 8 Fagan’s use of force logs; 2) depositions of Dr. Lenhart and Sergeant Stansberry; and 3) 9 depositions of the City’s police commission, or others high ranking officials. The Court finds that 10 Plaintiffs have not fulfilled the requirements of Rule 56(f). As an initial matter, the Court notes 11 that Magistrate Judge Laporte ordered eight “use of force” logs produced, and it appears that 12 Defendants have produced these documents. Moreover, at oral argument, Plaintiffs conceded that 13 neither Dr. Lenhart nor Sergeant Stansberry would likely offer any testimony that would raise an 14 issue of fact concerning the current motion. Finally, the Court notes that it allowed Plaintiffs to 15 take six depositions in the current case. Plaintiffs’ decision not to use those six depositions on 16 members of the police commission, or other high ranking officials to establish the identify of the 17 final policy maker on behalf of the City of San Francisco Police Department was a strategic 18 decision that the Court will not second guess.

19 Plaintiffs also seek leave to conduct further discovery based upon a series of articles which 20 appeared in the San Francisco Chronicle newspaper in February 2006. These articles detail the use 21 of force by San Francisco police officers from the period of 1996 to 2004. In support of their 56(f)
22 motion, Plaintiffs have offered the articles themselves and a declaration from the series author.
23 Rule 56(f) requires the moving party to make a showing that additional evidence exists which, if 24 submitted, would be sufficient to avert an unfavorable summary judgment ruling. Id. The Court 25 does not find, based upon the offered articles and the declaration, that Plaintiffs have met their 26 burden.

27 First, the record reflects that Plaintiffs have not demonstrated diligence as to their Rule 28 56(f) request. The Court notes that Plaintiffs were allowed more than adequate time to complete

United States District Court

For the Northern District of California

1 discovery in this case. On July 6, 2004, the Court extended that time allowed for both parties to 2 complete fact discovery. On November 1, 2004, the Court once again extended the deadline for 3 the parties to complete discovery. On December 13, 2004, the Court ordered the deadlines for all 4 discovery stayed. The Court referred this matter to Magistrate Judge Laporte for discovery 5 purposes, and the record reflects that the parties engaged in discovery conferences with Magistrate 6 Judge Laporte throughout the spring of 2005. On June 9, 2005, Magistrate Judge Laporte granted 7 in part Plaintiffs' motion to compel documents. In light of this procedural history, the Court finds 8 that Plaintiffs have been given more than adequate opportunity to obtain full and complete 9 discovery regarding their claims.

10 Additionally, Plaintiffs have not met their burden in demonstrating the existence of 11 evidence which would avert summary judgment on the issues before the Court. First, the 12 Chronicle articles and the declaration submitted address the use of force by the San Francisco 13 Police Department, but do not address the pertinent issue here: the existence of a policy of 14 unlawful use of force rising to the level of deliberate indifference to Plaintiffs' rights during the 15 time of Plaintiffs' claims.¹² This is a critical distinction, as only the use of wrongful or excessive 16 force is relevant to the instant case. Moreover, the nexus between a series of newspaper articles 17 regarding the use of force by police officers and the existence of a policy reflecting a deliberate 18 indifference to training or to failure to discipline is highly speculative on this record. This 19 undermines Plaintiffs' assertion that the evidence supporting their motion actually exists. Finally, 20 Plaintiffs have not produced evidence that increased training or discipline would have prevented 21 the constitutional injury here, and nothing in the articles suggests the existence of additional 22 evidence which would remedy this deficiency. Accordingly, Plaintiffs' showing falls well short of 23 the requirement that Plaintiffs "specifically identif[y]" information that would avert summary 24 judgment and that Plaintiffs demonstrate prior diligence in acquiring the sought after information.
25 Qualls, 22 F.3d 844. Plaintiffs' motion for additional discovery under Rule 56(f) is therefore 26 DENIED.

27
28 ¹²Plaintiffs cite an article in which Defendant Fagan "reported using force 14 times in his first 13 months." The article does not distinguish between legitimate force and wrongful/excessive force. (Plaintiff's Motion for Leave to Supplement Pursuant to Rule 56(f), Doc. No. 237, 3).

3 CONCLUSION

4 For the foregoing reasons, the Court GRANTS Defendants' motion for summary judgment
5 as to Plaintiffs' Monell claims and DENIES Plaintiffs' motion for additional discovery under Rule 6 56(f).

7 IT IS SO ORDERED.
